

The Art of Performance

Instructor: Nathaniel Eschler

March 5, 2011 at 2pm

Have you prepared fully for your upcoming recital, but still feel “unprepared” due to nerves? Do you wish you could have a “dress rehearsal” prior to an upcoming performance? Through practice in a performance setting, students can prepare for their recital and ease tension about recital uncertainties.

In this workshop, students will perform 1 to 2 pieces of music and receive both peer and professional review on their performance and stage etiquette. Following the performances, a discussion will be directed towards how to deal with pesky nerves and proper entry and exit techniques.

Both performers and audience members are needed, so please feel free to attend the workshop even if you do not intend to perform. There is something for everyone to learn!

Location: Recital Hall in the Jared Building at Village Music School

Time: 2 PM – 3 PM

Fee: $29 (please pre-register at the front office)

Biography:

Nathaniel Eschler has his Masters Degree in Music Composition and is currently working on his Dissertation. He holds an undergraduate degree in classical guitar performance.
